

NEWS ANNOUNCEMENT

For Immediate Release

City of Roanoke, a U.S. Local Government implements AtomicEMT™ to Reduce Domino Email Storage

Westford, MA, August 30th, 2005 – Exivity Inc., a leader in the IBM/Lotus Domino Email Attachment Management market and an IBM/Lotus Vanguard Launch Partner for ND6, today announced that the City of Roanoke has selected Exivity's AtomicEMT "single instance storage" solution to reduce its overall Domino e-mail storage.

As a minority owned business, Exivity will be building on its success in government accounts globally with installations at EPA and Birmingham City council in UK by focusing on expanding its marketing and sales efforts into the government market.

"Federal and State governments have a large number of Lotus Domino installations. With today's government budget constraints, we are delighted to have a well respected and skilled organization like City of Roanoke as a customer of Exivity," said Frank Woo, President of Exivity. "We see the government market as an important market moving forward and will continue to bring the most comprehensive, cost effective solution to this market"

About Exivity, Inc.

Founded in 2000, Exivity, Inc. a subsidiary of Softlinx, Inc. is a leading provider of software and professional services for enterprise business communications and email attachment management for IBM/Lotus Domino. Exivity's focus is to reduce the Total Cost of Ownership (TOC) of Email by solving the storage and bandwidth problems caused by Email overload while organizing the Email content available for corporate warehousing. For more information visit www.exivity.com or call 1-978-392-1360.

About City of Roanoke

The City of Roanoke has been recognized five-time All-American cities and is considered to be one of America's Most Livable Communities in 2004. With a population over 100,000, the city is the center of one of Virginia's largest metropolitan regions, and a hub of transportation, finance, and industry for the southwestern part of the state. The scenic beauty of the Roanoke Valley, located between the Blue Ridge and the Virginia Allegheny Highlands, makes the city a pleasant as well as an economically diverse place to live and work. The city's position on the East Coast gives it ready access to close to two-thirds of the total population of the nation within a radius of 500 miles.